THE preservation and publication of the immense quantity of National Music still existing in Ireland, and of which much is yet unwritten, have long been a desideratum with those who are acquainted with the great extent and value of some private collections. Among these collections lie, almost unknown, many hundreds of airs hitherto unpublished in any form, and which range through every class of pure Irish Music, from the most elevated style of ancient vocal melody, down to the smooth-flowing, graceful songs of the last two centuries; and among which are preserved very many, too, of those vigorous, dance-compelling, quick tunes, which cannot be equalled by any similar music of other countries. Besides these collections, a considerable quantity of airs, not yet noted down, is to be found current, as is well known, among the peasantry in all parts of the country.

This Society has been instituted for the purpose of preserving, classifying, and publishing these airs of every kind, and likewise all such words (whether in the Irish or English language), connected with any of them, as appear to possess any peculiar interest.
